BELLE BOYD'S TROUBLES.

WAS NOT TRAVELING ALONE NOR FOR HER HEALTH.

Was the Mother of Two Charming Girls who Fascinated the Guileless "Johnnies."

INSIGHT INTO THE GIDDY WHIRL.

[Owensboro Messenger.]

Belle Boyd, the Confederate spy, who lectured here recently on her experiences in the war, and who was lately arrested in Lexington, charged with attempting to beat a board bill, is not the lone, lorn widow that many people had been led to expect. While here she had a "manager" with her. He was about half her age, and was her husband, but the following story from the Evansville Tribune shows that the brave Confederate spy had also other "incombrances" in the way of a family:

"When the L. and N. train from the South pulled into the depot Oct. 3, a middle aged man and a woman, a pretty blonde, carrying a baby in her arms and a brunette, decidedly charming, stepped from the train. Those who saw them decided at once they were people of wealth and refinement. They strolled leisurely down the platform of the depot, handed their telephones and handbags to a porter, engaged a cab and were driven to the Roston House.

"It was not long until it became known that they were not traveling for their health. They were the remains of a disgruntled opera company which had sought to increase its capital by a visit to the centennial and found their efforts unappreciated by the southerners.

"Their names appeared on the hotel register as Mr. and Mrs. Nat F. High, Mrs. J. F. Williams and Miss M. I. Hammond.

"Mrs. High, or as she is known to the amusement public, Belle Boyd, realized the seriousness of her position, and being a woman equal to any emergency, decided that the best way of securing the necessary would be a trip through Kentucky.

"She decided to become the 'Famous Confederate Spy,' and no sooner came to the decision than she packed her trunk, and with her wardrobe and her husband, started out to tell the old soldiers what she had done during the war.

"Before leaving she told Mr. Roston, proprietor of the hotel where they were stopping, sweet stories about how much money she would make from her lectures, and with a goodby, which might have been said by a much younger woman, she started on her expedition leaving behind her the two vicious daughters, a disappointed landlord and a board bill.

"Although they were not heiresses or descendants of any royal line, the pretty blonde and the prettier brunette were not slow in gathering around them a number of young men, who desired to gain cotillions, have a good time and spend their surplus plunks.

"The last remark of the locomotive bearing their mother out of the city had no sooner died away than the smiles of the two stars, although out of a job, began to play havoc with the hearts of every young man, and older ones, too, who chanced to look into their eyes. Mrs. Williams forgot the baby, Miss Hammond forgot she was married; in fact, they both forgot everything in their conquest of hearts in Evansville.

"There were suppers, box parties at the Grand. They were the recipients of the favors of more than a dozen prominent young men who lost their hearts, their heads, and lastly, their pocketbooks, all on account of the smiles of the pretty blonde and the charming brunette.

"If they had admired in Evansville, they were no less fortunate in Nashville. A representative and part owner of a large candy factory at that city

A REMARKABLE CASE.

THE DISAPPEARANCE AND CAPTURE OF FRANK NOVAK.

His Pursues Traveled 26,000 Miles to Capture and Bring Him Home.

THE LONGEST CHASE ON RECORD.

CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA, Dec. 2.—On the morning of February 3, 1897, the store building of Novak & Jick at Wallford, Mo., together with the adjoining building, in which Frank A. Novak conducted a private bank, was consumed by fire.

The traveling man protested, felt in his pockets, looked through his wallet and then admitted he had barely enough money to carry him home. When he finally succeeded in leaving, he promised to remit the young women's hard and left an elegant gold watch as security. In his haste to escape he even forgot to remove his sweetheart's picture and lock of golden hair from the case of the timepiece.

"After the departure of the traveling man Mrs. Williams and her sister began to look for new fields of conquest, and it is said succeeded in ensnaring a young banker of Henderson to the extent of a cool hundred or so by their irresistible ways.

"Mrs. Williams and Miss Hammond, like their mother, left a board bill and a number of old letters and newspapers behind them when they took the train for Louisville, Ky. Until the news of Belle Boyd's arrest they had been practically forgotten except by those who had fallen victims to their siren charms. Where they are now nobody seems to know. The last heard from the two sisters was when they were making war on the hearts of the guileless and moneyed youths of Louisville.

Roasted Alive.

[Owensboro Messenger.]

The sickening details of the burning to death of a little child at Curdsville Monday afternoon reached the city Tuesday morning.

At about 4 o'clock Monday afternoon the four-year-old son of Mr. Jack Lamb, of Curdsville, was playing in a room at the family home alone, all the family being momentarily absent from the room. The child's clothing caught fire from the grate, and it was instantly enveloped in flames. In the room was a bed-cloth which had just been filled with new straw and thrown down upon the floor in the room. The straw ignited and made a big blaze. Members of the family heard the child's screams and rushed in and rescued it from the flames, but too late to save its life. Its whole body was roasted to a crisp. It lingered in great agony for four hours, when death ended its horrible sufferings. The remains were buried Tuesday afternoon.

The Kansas Way.

[Exchange.]

"Before the state takes up the collection," said the Kansas preacher the other night, "I wish to make a few remarks. There are over 200 persons in this house, counting sinners and saints, big and little, male and female, not including the crying babies. If each person present here thinks my sermon worth the price of a beer or a nickel of pay, five red cents or a dime, let them pay that amount. If each pays a nickel it will make a total of $10 this evening. This repeated every week in the year would pay my salary. A sermon that isn't worth a nickel isn't worth coming to hear, and a person that will beat the Lord, the preacher or the printer is a goat of the most odiferous kind."

Our Naval Armament.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 30.—The annual report of the secretary of the navy is a most interesting document, and is proof conclusive that the American navy has assumed proportions that should cause the patriotic heart to swell with pride.

The present effective fighting force of the navy consists of four battleships of the first class, two battleships of the second class, two armored cruisers, six torpedo cruisers, fifteen gunboats, one double-turreted monitor, one ram, one destroyer, one dispatch boat, one transport steamer, and five torpedo boats. There are under construction five battleships of the first class, sixteen torpedo boats and one submarine boat. There are six other naval vessels, including those used as training, receiving, and naval reserve ships, tug boats and single turreted monitors, and some unclassified craft.

There is, further, the auxiliary fleet. This consists, first, of more than twenty subsidized steamers which comply with the requirements of the postal act of March 3, 1891, with regard to their adaptability to naval service, and to an armament of main and secondary batteries; second, of a very much greater number of large merchant marine steamers, which can be available at any time of need.

These auxiliaries ranging from 2,000 to 13,000 tons, will, if occasion requires, form a powerful fleet of ocean cruisers, capable of swift and formidable attack upon an enemy's commerce. Their great coal capacity will also enable them to remain a long time at sea in search of the whereabouts of hostile vessels.

A QUESTION ANSWERED.

The Hartford Herald has been reading some news from the Klondike country, and in the article was a list in round numbers of the fortunes that had been made there.

"Say, papa," inquired the small son, "what are round numbers?"

"They are numbers that are not square, my son," responded the father promptly; but the boy didn't know any more than he knew before.

Dance Closed With Prayer.

[Cincinnati Democrat.]

It is not a general occurrence throughout this section of the country for a ball to end in prayer, but such was the case in Cedar on last Saturday night. For two weeks past Rev. James H. Rigg, of the Baptist church, has been conducting a revival meeting there and the greatest of interest has been manifested. Heon various occasions denounced dancing and theaters from the pulpit, and on Saturday night after his services for the evening were over, he had an occasion to pass down Bridge street, when suddenly strains of music in a hall fell upon his ear, and the sound of gay young people "tripping the light fantastic" could also be heard. Rev. Mr. Rigg at once entered the hall and winding his way through the merry young couples on the floor, to the center of the ball room, he started all present by the command, "Let us pray."

The reverend gentleman at once began and prayed fervently for fully ten minutes. At first but few knelt, but before the end of five minutes every couple on the floor were on their knees or had bowed their heads through respect to the reverend gentleman. It was a scene unequalled before in the history of this town. Gay young society people could be seen weeping bitterly, and when Rev. Mr. Rigg arose from his knees, more than a dozen young ladies and gentlemen went forward and gave him their hand, and remarked that they would never again enter the ball room.

The festivities for the evening were brought to a standstill and the orchestra in a low tone, played "Nearer My God To Thee," as the young people departed for their homes.

It was an event that those present will never forget. At the service of Rev. Mr. Rigg in his church Sunday evening the faces of some ten or twelve of the young people who were at the dance the night previous could be seen in the congregation, and they occupied seats well up to the minister.

Some Currency Measures.

[New York Times.]

The only currency measure which the Administration is likely to press upon Congress is one repealing the act of May 31, 1878, which authorizes the reissues of the old legal tender notes, whether they come into the Treasury by redemption or otherwise; separating the gold redemption reserve from the other funds in the Treasury, and permitting the reissue of demand notes only against gold deposited for their future redemption. It is doubtful whether a measure of this kind can be passed, but if it can, it will place the issue department of the treasury in a position similar to that of the issue department of the Bank of England, and deprive the enemies of Government paper money of all pretext for denouncing it as an "endless chain" for depleting the Treasury of its gold. Under it, so soon as any considerable amount of Government notes were sent in for redemption, and the gold drawn out for them was shipped abroad, the currency would be contracted, interest rates would rise and the outflow of gold would be followed by its return to this country.

It is desirable, however, that to secure to the Treasury the full benefit of this reform, the currency issued by the national banks should be retired as fast as possible consistent with the vested rights of the banks, and its place supplied with Government notes. Fortunately the charters of a majority of the banks will expire in the course of the next ten years, and those of nearly all of them in five years thereafter. These charters should be required to incorporate themselves under the laws of the respective States relinquishing completely the privilege of issuing currency, which ought never to have been granted them. With bank currency out of the way, that of the Government would have the field to itself, and might be augmented without risk to meet every requirement of business. Provision also should be made for supplying the needs of the Government, in case of a deficient revenue, by giving the Secretary of the Treasury authority to borrow money on short-dated obligations. At present the only way to meet a deficiency is by availing himself of the doubtful powers conferred upon him by the resumption act of 1875, and selling bonds under the pretext of providing gold for redemption purposes. This is a subterfuge to which no Government should be compelled to resort, and the employment of it by the Cleveland Administration will ever be a blot upon its record.

HE GOT HIS MONEY.

AFTER RELATING A LITTLE PRIVATE FAMILY HISTORY.

The Proud Cashier was Finally Induced to "Indemnify" the Old Gentleman.

EASY MATTER FOR MR. CROWDER.

[Detroit Free Press.]

The old farmer's fingers were full of knots and fence rail splinters, and he had to look over his spectacles for some time before he saw the paying teller at his window, but he managed to hand in the check he had been carrying wrapped in his red handkerchief, and stood waiting for his money.

"You will have to be identified before we can pay this," said the teller. The farmer stooped a little, stuck his head against the window grating and said explosively:

"Hey?"

The teller repeated his statement. The old farmer took the check, folded it carefully with his big fingers, and then rubbed his gray chin whiskers thoughtfully.

"Have to be indemnified, do I?" he said, thoughtfully. "Lemme see; who knows me? That's Jim Patterson, but he lives 'way up town. Why, say? this here's Carrin's bank, isn't it?"

"This is the First National Bank," said the teller, "and Mr. Carrington is the Cashier."

"What is he?"

"Second window to your right."

The old man stepped over to the Cashier's window and rapped on it with his whiptock. The Cashier, smooth, cool, distant, gray side-whiskered, confronted him.

"I want to get the money on this here check, and that clerk young fellow in the other pen said I would have to be indemnified."

"That is the rule," said the Cashier. "You will have to bring some one in who knows you to vouch for your identity."

"Couldn't you do it?" asked the old man.

"Certainly not, unless I were acquainted with you."

The old farmer laughed so loudly that everybody in the bank looked around and listened.

"Why, smash all potter bugs! Don't you remember 'Lis Crowder? I went to school with 'em; lived next door to 'em when you was plain Pete Carrington's 'stead of P. Elliott Carrington, Esquire. I kin indemnify you if you can't indemnify me. Member that day when they had your pa up for stealing wood, and me and you and Sam Pinner chinked the Constable with seed peraters? Member how yer ma used to look you on up Saturdays when she used to go out to do the section gang's 'washin' and you—"

"It is all right, Mr. Crowder," said the Cashier, turning a little red on his smoothly shaven cheeks. "I did not recognize you at first. It has been a good many years since I have seen you. Step over to the teller's window, and your check will be paid."

"In a minute," said the old farmer, beaming with pleasure as he recalled the scenes of his youth. "Why, I could vouch for you if I met ye in Afrikay. You never could look a feller straight in the face, and you've got that sear on your ear yet that Jold man Pinner gave you when he caught ye tryin' to st-ah his best turkey."

"Yes, yes," said the Cashier hurriedly as he started things about on his desk and frowned deeply at some old envelope, "those old times—yes, certainly all that sort of thing, to be sure—quite so, indeed. The teller is waiting to pay your check."

"I'm goin' in a minute. Why talk about indemnifyin' Pete Carrington, you want to hear me do it. Now, I bet you don't member that day when—"

"You'll have to excuse me, Mr. Crowder," said the Cashier, prancing up and down in his cage and pretending to be looking for something. "I am very busy to-day."

"Yes, I'll excuse you," said the old farmer, learning his elbows on the window. "I just wanted to see how good I could indemnify you if I tried. Guess you find this kind of work easier than peddlin' fertilizer in an ox cart, like you did the year your uncle Dick got mixed up in that train robbery, don't you?"

The Cashier left his desk suddenly with an important looking batch of papers in his hand and walked back to the private office. The old man stamped over to the teller again and handed his check between the bars.

"Pete says you can pay it," he said. "Mr. P. Elliott Carrington's indemnified me, and I've indemnified Pete. I could go on indemnifyin' him for two hours and a half if I wanted to, clean on down to the time he left Cedar Creek with that Panner and Judy show. Gimme five or it in silver."

Her Comb Caught Fire.

VANCEBRO, KY., Dec. 1.—Miss Bertha Wilson, of South Manchester, this county, sixteen years of age, cousin of Hon. R. D. Wilson, of this city, met with a novel and fearful accident yesterday afternoon. She was sitting in front of a coal stove making a drawing, her head bent low, when quick as a lightning flash her celluloid comb caught fire. The blaze at once enveloped her head. She ran screaming into the dining-room. Her father seized a bucket of water and poured it over the girl's head. The flames were stopped, but not before all her hair was burned off and a large section of the scalp injured. Her clothing also ignited and her arms, back and shoulders were badly burned.

Don't be persuaded into buying inferior remedies. Chamberlain's Pain Balm costs no more, and its merits have been proven by a test of many years. Such letters as the following from L. G. Clay's Child Wife Ill.

VALLEY VIEW, KY., Dec. 1.—The condition of Gen. Cassius M. Clay's child-wife is deemed much worse this morning. Her physician, Dr. Northcutt, has ordered that no one be allowed to see her. He expresses much anxiety regarding her, and has arranged to remain at the Richardson house all day.

There are several theories regarding the true cause of her illness. Gen. Clay says it is caused by a horse throwing her three weeks ago. She was riding John Biggs' young mare, carrying behind her a side-saddle, when the mare took fright and threw her. Her foot caught in the stirrup, and she had a narrow escape from being killed.

How to Prevent Pneumonia.

At this time of the year a cold is very easily contracted, and if left to run its course without the aid of some reliable cough medicine it is liable to result in that dread disease, pneumonia. We know of no better remedy to cure a cough or cold than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. We have used it quite extensively and it has always given entire satisfaction.—Ocala, Ind. Ter. Chief.

This is the only remedy that is known to be a certain preventive of pneumonia. Among the many thousands who have used it for colds and influenza have never yet learned of a single case having resulted in pneumonia. Persons who have weak lungs, or have reason to fear an attack of pneumonia, should keep the remedy at hand. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by Z. Wayne Griffin & Bro., Hartford; A. S. How often do we hear people ask "Where on earth do all the flies come from?" An exchange says it is simple enough: The toper makes the whiskey fly; the cyclone makes the house fly; the carpenter makes the saw fly; the boarder makes the butter fly; the blacksmith makes the shoe fly; the jockey makes the horse fly; the butcher makes the cow fly; the spendthrift makes the money fly; and the housewife makes the old man fly.

In Memoriam.

Died near Morgantown, Ky., Nov. 19, 1897, Mrs. Mary J. Austin, wife of Brooks Austin and a sister of Mr. G. W. Bennett, Beds, Ky. Her sufferings were intense for many years, but her faith remained unshaken until the last. She bore her suffering with Christian fortitude and was never heard to complain. When the summons came she was ready to go. She leaves one sister and three children to mourn her loss. Her only regret seemed to be that she had to leave them. "Weep not, dear children and sister, she is not dead, but asleep."

Yet again we hope to meet her. When the day is life is fled, And in heaven with joy to greet thee, Where no farewell tears are shed.

Rheumatism

Is a blood disease and only a blood remedy can cure it. So many people make the mistake of taking remedies which at best are only tonics and cannot possibly reach their trouble. Mr. Asa Smith, Greencastle, Indiana, says: "For years I have suffered with Sciatic Rheumatism, which the best physicians were unable to relieve. I took many patent medicines but they did not seem to reach my trouble. I gradually grew worse until I was unable to take my food or handle myself in any way. I was absolutely helpless. Three bottles of S.S.S. relieved me so that I was soon able to move my right arm; before long I could walk across the room, and when I had finished one dozen bottles was cured completely and am as well as ever. I now weigh 170."

A Real Blood Remedy.

S.S.S. cures Scrofula, Cancer, Eczema, and all forms of blood troubles. If you have a blood disease, take a blood medicine—S.S.S. (Genuine) is the only one that is exclusively for the blood and is recommended for nothing else. It forces out the poison matter permanently. We will send to anyone our valuable blood.
